Teaching schools to cultivate positive,
mission-minded environments

Positive and healthy school cultures and climates are the foundations of high-quality learning environments.

The reform efforts of the last 30 years have failed to improve student achievement in schools because they failed to adequately address the importance of the culture and climate of schools.

It's time to recreate the conditions for effective teaching and learning to occur.

Studies show that happiness and well-being are closely correlated with productivity and performance. This means that as educators, it is our responsibility to invest in both our employees' and students' academic and personal development.
